- G. Clay targets may only be placed on the berm or appropriate clay target holders. They may not be placed on the target frames.
- H. On the Rifle Range a member and his guests may occupy only one firing point/bench except when there are few shooters and ample vacant benches are available.
- I. Procedure for “going cold”: All shooters on the Rifle Range will cease fire and the range declared “cold” at intervals of approximately 15 to 30 minutes to permit shooters to go downrange to examine and change targets. The procedure is as follows:
 - 1. Any shooter, or the range officer, may call for a cold range.
 - 2. When a call for a “cold range” is heard each and every shooter will proceed to unload his firearm leaving the action open and move off his shooting bench.
 - 3. A shooter may request a short delay if necessary.
 - 4. When the person calling for the “cold range” has observed that every shooter has complied with the first step of this procedure he will declare the range “cold”. Shooters may proceed downrange.
 - 5. Once declared “cold” guns are not to be touched, adjusted or moved in any manner until the range is declared “hot”.
 - 6. Shooters arriving when the range is cold may place a piece of gear, not a firearm, on an empty shooting bench to identify it as theirs before going downrange to place targets. They may place the gear on the bench only. They may NOT set up or adjust spotting scopes, shooting bags, etc. Firearms may be placed on the bench and gear set up and adjusted only after the range goes “hot”.
- J. Procedure for “going hot”;
 - 1. When there are no shooters remaining downrange, any shooter, or the range officer may call for a “hot range”
 - 2. Each shooter on the range will acknowledge the call or if they see someone still downrange they will call the range “cold”.
 - 3. When every shooter has acknowledged the range “hot” the person calling for the “hot range” shall announce the range “hot” and shooters may address their firearms.
 - 4. No person shall go downrange (i.e. any distance whatsoever in front of the shooting benches) for any reason when the range is “hot”
- K. Anyone may call for an immediate cease fire if an unsafe condition exists.
